

CHANGE

BY CALUM BROWN

"The course of your life, is dependent on one thing. A thing that is important, vital, a key to making progress. Some embrace it. Cherish it. Others may differ. Others may fear it. Loathe it. And others, may be too blind, or arrogant, to see the value within it. A pity, really. Because I think, that it is utterly beautiful."

"When I feel it coming, when my mind senses its approach... I quiver. My heart pounds, my breathing intensifies! It can be frightening. But when it comes, when it's there, when it's happening, in that one moment, you realise that for something you thought would end you, ruin you... you then see otherwise. For it is a blessing."

"Change. It's precious. It is a gift. Without the capacity of change we can never progress. Life would never prevail. Life cannot stand on its own two feet alone. Change must come in. It's scary, granted. But just think for a moment. What good has change given you? Think about it. Think carefully. Those moments in your past, where the course of your life, turned to a new direction."

"A new school. College. University. Moving house. A new job. A new friend. A new addition to the family. A new Doctor Who. Change is fearful. But it is not a curse. It's something to embrace. You see change coming, you feel it approaching, grab hold of it! Grab it with both hands, let it fill your mind with excitement! Let it beat your heart! Let it burn like wildfire in your soul! Let it party for crying out!"

"Change, whilst terrifying, is a joy. For where we stand in our future, where we make our success in our progress, is because we allowed a change."
